

George Washington Could not Tell a Lie

He was a proud owner of a hatchet.
With this hatchet he went around chopping things down.
He chopped down his fathers cherry tree.
When asked if he knew what had happened to the tree.
Young George told his father the truth.
Even though it was hard to do, George Washington did the right thing.

Help celebrate this fun story about one of our American President's by dipping your finger into red paint to make cherry's in this beautiful cherry tree.
